

Gifts of the Nile: water plants in Egyptian culture

By Hilary Wilson

The ancient Egyptians put plants to many uses as well as assigning symbolic value to them. This talk explores the importance of water plants in the everyday life and beliefs of ancient times and their continuing significance to the country's environment and ecology.

Saturday September 8th 2018
1.30 for 2.00pm

Free to members, Visitors: £3.00
Oakwood Centre, Headley Road, Woodley, RG5 4JZ
A TVAES lecture www.tvaes.org.uk

